

Animals can benefit us in our daily lives all of the time, but sometimes we do not realize it. Most people think that our pets are just there to be cute, but they are not! For instance, if you have a dog it could alarm you if there is a burglar in the house.

There are many different ways that a dog can benefit you. One way dogs can help us is by seeing eye dogs that help the blind function. Another way dogs can help us is therapy; they can make a person that is depressed be happy again just from the sight of a cuddly dog. There are also bomb and drug-sniffing dogs that can help us detect someone that is committing a crime. You also just have the plain cuddly dog that brings joy to your heart every time you make eye contact with it.

If you can believe it, wild animals benefit us in many ways too. One of the biggest things that wild animals do for us is help live by being in the food cycle, we would not be alive if it were not for animals. Animals also feed us with their meat, we eat beef and drink milk from cows, we eat bacon that is from a pig, and there are many other types of meat that we eat too. In some places they still use plowing animals to plow their crops. The Amish use horse and oxen carts for transportation. In some countries they still use work elephants! People that have been paralyzed sometimes have monkeys that help them do their every day things. One helpful thing for gardeners is vegetarian animal dung, which is used for fertilizer.

Small animals can make a big impact on us too. Birds get silent when a storm is soon to come, that helps us know that ahead of time. You will always know when winter is coming because you will start to notice squirrels gathering nuts to store for the winter.

Having a pet can give you responsibility and kindness. If you have a pet, you know that it is a big responsibility. You have to feed it, let it outside, and make sure it gets enough exercise. A pet can help you be a kinder person by always being gentle with it and always caring for it. Animals can make you a better person.

Our pets and wild animals can make a big difference in our daily lives, when we do not notice it. They can make us be a better person and they can even save our lives.
