

Pets benefit our daily lives in many ways, more than we can imagine at times. Whether we're looking for love, fun, or companionship, our pets are always there to fulfill our needs and to brighten up our lives. Regardless of size, we can always count on them to be our biggest fans.

We look to our pets as our best friends, and we know we can rely on them to be there when we need them. They give us the unconditional love that no human can match. They are always there for us, no matter the costs.

My two dachshunds, Buster and Hoover, show their incredible love through many ways. They are both rescue dogs, with two different stories of their own.

I am an only child, and before I had Buster, I was always finding myself feeling lonely and wishing for someone to play with. Buster brought the opportunity to have a new furry little brother! He is always there to cheer me up when I am down, and though he is old, he is very playful and active!

Once I got Hoover, everything changed for the better! I had found the company of a second dachshund, just as great as the first! Hoover is one of the most playful and loving dogs I know, besides Buster. He is always wanting to play, no matter what time of day!

Today, both of them continue to show their undying and unconditional love towards my family and me. Through these wonderful years, my dogs have helped to develop my sense of responsibility and my compassion for animals.

As you can see, my two dogs have definitely given benefits to my daily life in many ways. Other animals do the same for other people. Take service animals for instance, I have seen how seeing-eye dogs have helped the blind in reaching their destinations safely and giving them the ability to go where needed without the worry of not getting there safely.

Pets also give an amazing companionship to the elderly. They give love as well as a wonderful and lasting friendship. The elderly may be dealing with the hardships of losing a loved one, and are in a state of depression. Pets can help fill that void in their hearts. They can give the best of love unlike any other.

Our pets can help bring out life's purest joy. They fill our hearts with happiness and give us something to look forward to each day. They brighten up our hearts as they embrace us with their amazing, and unfathomable love. We find ourselves thinking of them each day, never shall they leave our hearts. They impact our lives more than we could ever imagine. WE do the same for them. Give them your heart, and they'll give you theirs.
