Tanner Greenwood

5th Grade

What are some ways that can make life better for animals in our community? That is what I am going to answer. You know how humans work out, well what if we made a work out place for dogs. When the dogs get fit, they want to go on walks more often which also helps us get fit. So it's a plus for both the dog and the owner. Also, on the news they could tell you to buy a birdfeeder and bird seed, and the stores make the items cost less. Then you could hang it on a tree and feed the birds in the winter that can't find very much food. One time I made a bird feeder on a pine cone and lots of birds came and ate all of the birdseed on the pine cone. Also, if you do that you get to see all the beautiful birds and hear them chirp.

For cats, they could organize a show for the most beautiful cats and their owners would put bow on them and their owners will be nice to their cats and then the cats will be happier. If you win you would get a prize, which could be a camera and the first picture you take would be of the cat.

You know how that stinky smell annoys everyone? Most of the time it is a dead squirrel that has been run over by a car. To make the air smell better then dead squirrels, people should be more considerate about animals so if a squirrel runs in front of them, they don't just run over it. They should just slow down, let it cross, and keep going. They only have to wait like fifteen seconds. I walk home from school a lot so it smells really bad whenever there is a dead animal on the road.

If you see a centipede, millipede, wasp, or spider or any other animals in your home, don't just kill them automatically. Before you kill them try your best to make them go outside. If it doesn't, you can trap it with a piece of paper on the ground and a cup and put it outside. Centipedes and millipedes are the easiest to catch. You just put a piece of paper on the ground, let it crawl on it, and take it outside to put it down.

These are my ideas to make life better for the animals in my community.