An animal shelter is a place where lost pets are taken care of until people come in the shelter and adopt them. If I was asked to help at a local animal shelter I would be asked to fill the cats and dogs water and food bowls to keep them alive and healthy so the people can adopt the dogs and the cats. I would also train the dogs, birds and other animals in the shelter. Volunteers should be train to train the animals and to take care of the animals.

This is because if volunteers are not careful the animals might get sick or even hurt. If I was asked to work at an animal shelter I would most likely be asked to clean and wash the animals and their cages. Most animal need to be cleaned really well when they first come into the shelter because they had been on the street for a very long time and are really dirty. Even after the animals have been in the shelter for a long time they still need to be washed a lot just like humans should take a bath every day.

The animals should also have their cages cleaned by volunteers because if not they will get sick when you go in the cat place, don't put your finger in the cage, cats like to eat dry food. Cats do not like to take a bath, dogs do not care if they take a bath some dogs don't like baths. Some dogs are wild like a k-9. A k-9 is the dogs that work for police officers. People have to be trained in order to be experts if you help the local animal shelter. The shelter is for animals that are lost like dogs and cats. Cats like mouse toys and yarn.
