Did you know that many animals have talents? In this world, some animals have a very special talents that most animals can not do which is communicating about the illness, Diabetes! To start, a Golden Retriever goes to get trained to know if a person's blood glucose is high or low. If the blood sugar is high then it puts it's paw on your hand to let you know, "Hey your glucose is high. You need to get some insulen in you!". To add, some beagles like to tap on you to let you know, "Hey your blood glucose is low you need to get some medicine or call 911 immediatly!". Finally, did you know some rabbits are born with this talent? Some are even trained to know low and high blood glucose. When your glucose is low the rabbit starts jumping on your heart like cray cray to let you know you need to get some medicine. In closing, from someone who has diabetes I can tell you this type of communication is critical.
